Dear Hiring Manager,

My name is Ariana Tiffany, and I'm writing to express my interest in the Caregiver position for your father. I'm a licensed practical nurse (LPN) with expertise in caring for older patients, skilled in providing medication administration, emotional support and hygienic care. Warm, responsible and organized, I'm passionate about the opportunity to provide your father with companionship and care that meets his needs.

I've worked as an LPN at a nursing home for five years, caring for over 50 older patients. In this position, I perform regular physical examinations, administer medicine, assist with mobility and hygiene and keep thorough medical records. While these tasks are vital, I aim to supplement them with emotional support. I believe that building trusting relationships with patients benefits their overall wellbeing and improves their quality of life, and I bring empathy, compassion and friendliness to my patient interactions daily.

I have experience working with patients with memory loss, and I use my expert organizational skills and health care knowledge to instill and maintain systems that benefit these patients. I noticed it's important to you that your father's caretaker supports his everyday needs in addition to his medical needs. I'm skilled at engaging patients in gentle activities, performing household chores, preparing nutritious meals and communicating with patients' families.

After reviewing your father's needs, I'm confident my medical expertise, approachable personality and organizational skills would enable me to help him live comfortably and safely. I appreciate you taking the time to consider me for the Caregiver position. I'm available for an interview during the daytime hours, and I'm happy to answer questions by phone.

Sincerely,
